Again, researchers were listening to a data set and they heard kind of a low "Grr" sound, like a low roar of a lion an the Serengeti [laughs], and that term has now stuck. It's been really fascinating to work with research scientists, to play them some of their data sets and actually see the epiphany moment as their gears turn, and they say, "Aha!, that's why we call it a 'lion roar.'" [Laughs]
